Copyright 1915: all rights reserved THE HAGUE, Sept. 18 .- In conversing o-day with a neutral who arrived yesterday from Duisburg, the great river and manufacturing town not far from Essen, I learned that much disatisfaction exists there over the way affairs have been mismanaged. My informant sald :

"I have been living in Duisburg for five months. Conditions there now are particularly bad owing to the prevalence Kama of dysentry, which is making great rav-ages among the population."

My informant produced a copy of Saturday's Rheine und Rugrzeitung, which ontained a display advertisement warning the public that dysentery is very infectious, is increasing rapidly and giving rules for avoiding it. Continuing this neutral said: this neutral said:

"Of the ten inmates of the house in which I lived four died of the disease last week, whereupon I decided that a change of air was advisable. Duis-

last week, whereupon I decided that a change of air was advisable. Duieburgers are disheartened over the reports of the German retirement. They were informed that the German army had taken up new positions in order better to defeat the enemy, but they know better. They now say that Germany cannot win the war.

"Duisburg itself presents a dismal appearance since most of the shops have been closed or are being closed. There is no life in the town, the cafes are deserted and only one or two moving picserted and only one or two moving picture houses are open.

The Kaiser's popularity is not what it was hence his recent and numerous elegrams to the various societies with the object of keeping himself in evidence and reviving loyalty. His visit to Essen was due to a desire to allay the discon-tent of the workers in the Krupp fac-tories. Since the French offensive soltories. Since the French offensive sol-diers home on leave conditionally are allowed to work in Krupps until they are called back to the front. Many hundreds have deserted and this is caus-Kaiser's aid was invoked. This accounts for his scriptural quotations and his

"The Kaiser's reference to his having gone as near the front as he could go doubtless was occasioned by an inkling of the fact that the people are saying. 'Why doesn't the Kaiser go and fight himself." I heard people at Essen, when he was there, say that he mingled among the workers, but was always surrounded by his bodyguard and courtiers, while every precaution was taken to keep him out of harm. It was a great relief to the persons in charge of his safety when

"Greatly as the Kaiser's popularity has diminished that of the Crown Prince has diminished that of the Crown Prince has undergone an eclipse. One story is that he has incurred disgrace, and though it is not known whether this is true he certainly has suffered a loss of prestige owing to the terrific sacrifices. of the army under his command without any thing but failure to show as a reit of its operations.
"The outlook for the coming winter cannot be said to be inviting. All the same I see no immediate prospect of the Germans doing anything but bear the ingrained German awe of the military and the police.

"Although Germany is suffering she A meeting of the Garment Salesemen's doubtless will suffer a great deal more Association for the purpose of organiz-ing for the Fourth Liberty Loan, will be demon which impelled her to this insene held at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the Hotel Breslin.
